

International Repatriation

What to do First

When someone passes away in the UK, we understand that it may take several days to make a decision whether or not to send the person back home for burial as you may have to wait for family meetings to take place and obtain instructions from relatives abroad before you are able to make the necessary arrangements.

Our first priority is to attend to the proper care of the deceased in order to allow you time to make the necessary decisions concerning the repatriation. As soon as possible, we need permission to collect the deceased from the place of death. Once in our care, and with your permission, we can carry out embalming of the deceased for repatriation. After embalming, we will ensure the deceased is cared for in a special climate controlled environment. We are able to hold the deceased for a reasonable length of time, without any additional cost, to allow you to make all of the necessary arrangements.

Legalities and Certificates

Once you have provided us with a copy of the Death Certificate, we handle the preparation of all other documentation required to repatriate the deceased by air transportation. All of the original documentation must accompany the coffin/casket and is inspected by officials in the destination country in order to clear through customs. Where necessary, we will obtain embassy/consular authority for the repatriation and ensure the completion of the necessary documentation, inspections and seals.

Care of the Deceased (Washing and Dressing)

At some of our premises, a special room for the family and friends to attend to the final washing and dressing of their loved one may be available, if required. This is to enable the family and friends to wash and dress the deceased in accordance with their religious and/or ethnic customs. If required, we are also able to assist with the dressing of the deceased.

Funeral Service in the UK Prior to Repatriation

We are able to assist in arranging for a funeral or memorial service in the UK prior to the repatriation. Many families will have their own church or venue. However, if required, we can assist in arranging for a suitable church or other venue, along with an officiant of the proper denomination or religion, organist, etc. (Additional charges for this service applies).

Flights

Depending upon current conditions and seasonal factors, we will recommend the airline currently offering the most reliable service. Families are free to suggest the use of alternate airlines.

Coffin and Casket Selection

We have a range of coffins and caskets suitable for international repatriation. All of our Metal American-Style Caskets are hermetically sealing and are suitable for international repatriation. They may be re-opened at the destination location and may also be used for burial in the destination country, local cemetery regulations permitting. Wooden coffins must be zinc lined (at an additional cost) for them to be hermetically sealed for repatriation.
